This one-mile, self-guiding interpretive trail begins and ends at the visitor center at Ozark Caverns. Coakley Hollow Trail meanders through one of the most ecologically diverse areas in Lake of the Ozarks State Park. Six different types of natural communities, including dolomite glades, fens, spring fed streams and several types of woodlands can be seen. Rare species such as Riddell's goldenrod, gray petaltail dragonflies and Ozark sculpins are frequently encountered. Other species such as the digger crayfish are found only in this valley in the park.
